Renaming the print job will allow the job to appear in Release Station with a unique document name.

Cost preview is seen at the workstation before the job is sent to the print queue.

Print Assistant

The screenshot shows a Windows-style dialog box titled "Attach a release key" with a close button in the top right corner. The main title "PrintAssistant" is displayed in a large font. Below the title, a message reads: "To secure and identify your personal documents for later release, you must provide a personal identifier for your print jobs." Under the heading "Document Name", the text "Microsoft Word - World History Research Paper.doc" is shown. A section titled "Release key entry" contains two text input fields. The first field is labeled "Release key" and contains three asterisks. The second field is labeled "Confirm release key" and also contains three asterisks. To the right of these fields, a note states: "A case-sensitive identifier using up to 14 characters." At the bottom of the dialog, there are two buttons: "OK" and "Cancel".

In place of network logins, users can create their own Release Key to keep their documents held in a secure queue.
